

to tell the truth - everybody's gone it's time to wake up for tomorrow with one eye open feel the breeze messing up your hair and clothes you know breathless against the moment you pinned me to tell the truth everybody knows there's no place for sticking out your nose the coming storm tearing through your fragile bones oh no it's tempting to hide your face again somebody knows somebody cares somebody's restless somebody cares broken town - lying here with my face pressed to the ground telling myself anything to stay alive how do other people do it how do they smile when they say all the words they know to the faces that they've learned to hate and it's time to get up and move just like the water through this broken town i've had enough with casting spells in this life going out in fashionable getup seeing all the looks of hatred through these eyes that glow and see so much affliction that it hurts when you say you're all alone again and you don't know what to think and it's known you'll never move because so few things amuse you anyway not anymore i want you to know through this bitter town you've had enough of hiding out in this life faithful - stepping back clearing the view it's been a long time since i've been faithful to me and seven days have gone by losing track of time is too easy when you're feeling old and sometimes all alone and still the days have gone by and seven days have gone by and nothing takes you back the way you like to think it can according to that look - hearing words that hurt you're saying words that are dear to me but I don't know what's worse the words or the meaning that I have just picked up i'm hearing things from nowhere according to that look i've lost the understanding but I know i'm growing and trying to regain all the things i've set out and tried to put away i realize that i've been wrong at times I was so sure and nothing could point it out faster than that look saying words that hurt i've been on both the lines it's harder now to intend the words or the meaning more like sink or swim - being awkward not knowing what to say in social situations i'd rather go away but i'm trapped again by what they call my friends it's different than what i'd say what's the meaning of trying to fit in when everyone's so nosy it's more like sink or swim sometimes I don't care what other people say there's so much I would like to do today that doesn't involve you because I don't care for boredom i'm not looking for more I'm going to do some things today to other peoples' world - seeing the moon watching from the road when no one else was looking I watched it move far across the sky I had to crane my neck squinting my eyes I noticed it was you and after all I saw I thought I could change but what else could I become something somewhere I felt like heading back to other peoples' world but when I did get back it's different somehow unfamiliar court - playing hardball in an unfamiliar court making up the moves trying hard not to stand out I want to know the rules of this game before I find myself flat upon the floor thinking to myself what for styled romance after unforgiving scenes it's better not to know every detail of such things before i hurt myself before you can hurt me i'm waiting here to see your words learned to hold the hand - well it's time to wake up it's time to shave it's time to go away for this special occasion it's not too often to step out of this game but if there is one part of me that could know where this train is heading I just might step back today and not roll out of bed into this day pushing forward i'm so aggressive at things that just don't show maybe I'll realize that people don't care who you are inside and I bet that I'm guilty of just what I have been hurting from because that's the way I've learned to live from watching other people that I know today I've learned to hold the hand of another like falling stars tonight - waiting for romance waiting forever making all the time wasting all the time trying to unwind drinking all the wine hoping for a cure intentions are fine I can't be gone today or someone takes my place because human hearts are like the falling stars tonight landing fast wherever they can fall time to grow - sharing all my life with you hoping I can find the view of knowing peace of mind again and taking what is mine my friend i'd take it all back just like I never said it all to anyone but I think it's time to grow hiding all my thoughts from you living secret lives alone wanting this to stop so I don't have to hide my face today and now it's time I should grow dancing on the stars - looking forward to another day i'm putting my best foot in front of me and walking toward anything that shines and makes my mind dance on the stars I wait feeling bolder and at the same time not feeling much of anything at all it makes me wonder what it's like to make my self feel I feel like dancing on the stars I feel like dancing on the stars I feel like dancing on the stars I feel like dancing on the stars I feel like dancing